Research Interests

My research connects social computing, human–AI decision-making, and AI for science. I study how people and AI use social signals, how large language models represent human values, and how domain and physical knowledge can make scientific AI more useful and reliable.

- Human–AI Decision-Making in Social Systems: social signals, unverifiable decisions, and the behavioral consequences of making hidden activities visible to people and AI.
- LLM Values and AI Orientalism: cultural value representations, representational asymmetries, and links between model behavior and training-data provenance.
- AI for Geospatial Science: automated and interactive dune segmentation, expert correction, tangible interaction, and cloud–edge–device collaboration.
- AI for Ocean Science: physics-informed spatiotemporal ocean prediction and early warning of marine heat extremes.
